It was in 1999 when my family shifted from Jinja to Florida in USA where my father was working as a magistrate. I had just completed my Primary Seven by then, so mum's plan to be accomplished immediately.

When we reached USA, I joined Loxas School. It became a big trouble to me to communicate with anybody at school. I could hardly hear what they said. I later resorted to using signs which convinced people at school that possibly I was dumb.

On Friday morning, my classteacher Mrs. Track Dowell took me to the hospital for a medial check up to prove if I was dumb. Fortunately enough, the doctor in the hospital was a Musoga, my tribe mate I was overjoyed and I told him my problem immediately. This shocked my teacher. She felt concerned and advised me to keep trying the American English language without fear!

When I reached home, I narrated the story to my sister and brothers who burst into laughter. Luckily enough, my father wasn't at home, however, mother sympathized with me and never reprimanded me for my stubborn trick.
