One night I woke up suddenly from my deep sleep. There was a strange smell in the air. It was the smell of smoke. I looked out of my window and saw a thick black cloud of smoke coming from the direction of the coop (chicken house).

A lot of chickens were flying about frantically. Some of them were violently flapping their wings. The poor chickens were trying to escape the fire through the wire netting. The fire was on the left side of the chicken house.

My father hacked the door of the house with an axe to let the chickens out.
